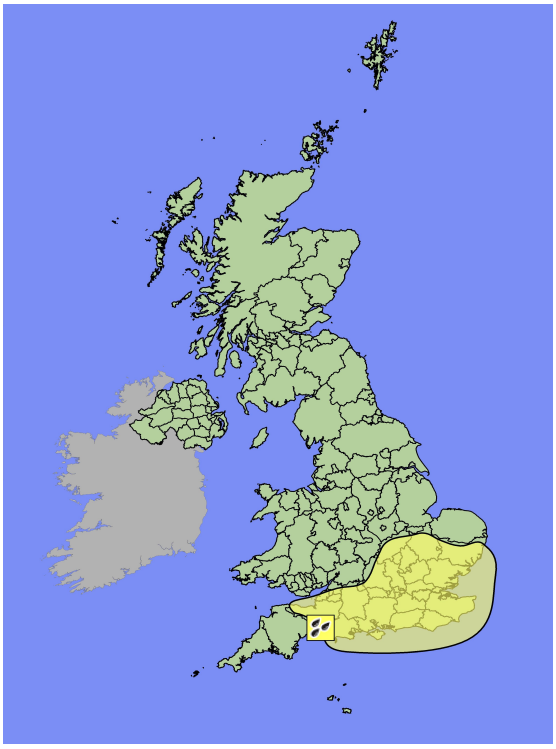
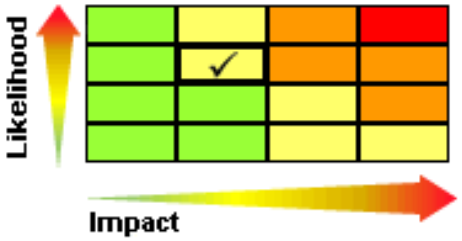
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A deeply unstable airmass extends across southern Britain today but will progressively become confined to eastern England through the afternoon and evening. This will lead to further heavy showers in places, some accompanied by hail and thunder. 15 mm of rain could occur in an hour or less with 20 to 30 mm possible in 2 or 3 hours very locally. As is usual with this type of situation many places should miss the worst of the downpours, but where they do occur localised flooding is possible.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Wed, 11th Jul 2012 until 20:00 on Wed, 11th Jul 2012

Further heavy showers are expected through today across parts of central, southern and southeast England. The showers will slowly die out from the west during the evening and first half of tonight.

The public should be aware that, with the ground being saturated, localised flooding could occur.
